CAPTURE OF SCH. WOODBURY

CANADIAN CRUISER FIRED FOUR ROUNDS AT FORMER HONOLULU VESSEL.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 21.—For the first time since the Canadian fishery cruiser service has attempted to interfere with American halibut fishing in northern waters, alleged to be contiguous to Canada, the dominion government cruiser Kestrel last Sunday afternoon got in real action with its big Nordenfeldt machine gun.

Four rounds were fired at the Seattle halibut fishing schooner Charles Levi Woodbury. Five bullets tore through the atmosphere in the direction of the Woodbury each time as the vessels headed at full speed from the west coast of Vancouver island and pointed toward the middle of the Pacific ocean.

Three of the rounds were merely directed to call attention to the command to heave to which had been issued to the American schooner. But the last series of shots meant business. The gun was pointed at the fishboat, which was then at a distance of about 200 yards and still making for the open sea as rapidly as possible. The bullets, aimed high, ripped one or two sails knocked splinters off the mainmast. Capt. Sinclair feared that he would be sunk right there if he did not stop. At the same moment the second gun of the Kestrel was swung across its deck to get into range of the fishing boat.

Immediately the Woodbury's engines were stopped and its sails gashed by British bullets, were hauled down. But even then the American captain would not willingly surrender. He declined to tie a hawser aboard his vessel, but a few minutes later an officer and three men from the Kestrel boarded his vessel and took charge.

Captain Newcomb of the Kestrel declares that if he ever had a clear case against an American vessel this is the one. Early Sunday afternoon the Kestrel was steaming north from Quatsino sound on the west coast, when Captain Newcomb espied an American vessel fishing between East and West Haycock islands. These islands lie about 10 miles off Cape Scott, the northernmost point of Vancouver island. The islands are themselves five miles apart, so that, from Captain Newcomb's figuring, it is impossible that the American boat could have been served if the vessel was within a mile more than two and a half miles from either shore. As a matter of fact Newcomb says that when he first observed the vessel it was within a mile of East Island.
